

Nomads Supports Tamwed

Tamwed is pleased that locally-based clothing company Nomads has agreed to sponsor our project that aims to improve the diet and health of some of the poorest and most isolated communities that our partner NGOs support.

Nomads ensure that the clothes they produce are ethically sourced, meeting the standards that comply with fair trade guidelines. Nomads believes that “trade not aid” is the best way to help maintain a sustainable and profitable living for the producers and themselves.

Nomads is able to promote traditional skills by supporting handicraft artisans. Embroideries, hand appliqué and sequin work can be found in some of their unique styles.

When speaking to the founders, Duncan Harvey and Vicky Jackson (right), they explained that “Fair trade also takes into consideration environmental issues. In the past 6 years Nomads has been working towards finding new ways to reduce the environmental impact our products have on the planet. Organic cotton is now more available to us and we are happy to increase this range yet again for the new collection. Farming organically means that no harmful chemicals are used and the land requires less water. Recycling our packaging and using biodegradable postbags are also helping to reduce the impact our business has on the environment.”
